Biography

Rebekah Lewis is a senior-level evaluation specialist with more than 15 years of experience in health and higher education settings. She uses a participatory approach to program evaluation, collaborating with stakeholders throughout the evaluation process to select appropriate content, models, methods and theory. In addition to program evaluation, Rebekah's areas of expertise include women's health, qualitative research methods and medical education. Before joining the Canadian Women's Heart Health Centre team, she held research and evaluation positions in the McGill University Faculty of Medicine and Health Sciences and the Bixby Centre for Global Reproductive Health at the University of California, San Francisco. She received her Master's of Public Health from the Boston University School of Public Health.
